As the title says, I'd like to reload the page but without using a button. Basically, I'm trying to use something like location.reload() but this only reloads the current page, not the entire site. I'm hoping for something that allows me to reload the entire website, or if possible, just a certain div. A: window.location.reload() will reload the page. For example, if you have a page that loads the content for multiple pages, then you could pass the 'this' as a parameter to reload. In your case, you could just use: window.location.reload(document.getElementById("yourElement")); instead of window.location.reload(); in the first place, is the syntax for reloading a particular DOM element. 82157476af
